

Hannah is a CCAR Certified Recovery Coach and is working toward her National Certification. She grew up in beautiful Sedona, Arizona and re-located to Denver, Colorado in the summer of 2013. She has always wanted to make a change in the world and thought she would do it by addressing the issues with mental health. Her addiction to drugs and alcohol took her on a detour from this path. Her addiction eventually found her homeless in the summer of 2019 and she hit her bottom in the fall of 2020. After fleeing a domestic abuse situation, she landed in Hazelbrook Sober Living. Hannah found connection there and started working a 12-step program. Through the program she learned that in sharing her experience, strength, and hope with other's suffering from the disease of addiction she can help them feel that much less alone. After finding her passion in helping others who are struggling with addiction, she decided to become a Recovery Coach. She joined the Hornbuckle Foundation Team in the summer of 2021 and began working with SAFER/Mental Health Colorado through the foundation. She has become an asset because of her resources in the Denver Metro Area and has recently received the title of Resource Coordinator for the Hornbuckle Foundation. She finds fulfillment working alongside recoverees and helping them find their own pathway to recovery.

Hannah once said "Seeing the light come back on in their eyes is the greatest gift and being a small part of the makes it all the worthwhile."
