

After my time in art school in California and several years bouncing around working odd jobs in Boston and San Francisco – mostly in restaurants - I moved to Colorado in 1981 from my hometown of Woods Hole, Massachusetts. I have enjoyed great fortune with a successful 30-year career as a working artist and have taught art at the University of Denver School of Art and Art History since 1991. I believe that creativity of all kinds is the secret ingredient of a fulfilling life and I have extensive experience working as an art therapist with a wide variety of diverse and special needs populations. I am grateful to be able to join the team at the Hornbuckle Foundation and to be given the opportunity to share my experience in long term sobriety to offer hope to those seeking a better future in recovery. I currently live in Denver with my wife Sara, my son Charlie, my daughter Olive, and Missy the yappy wonder dog.
